

Contributing Authors

Abdelkader Aoudjit teaches philosophy at Northern Virginia Community College. He is the author of The Algerian Novel and Colonial Discourse: Witnessing to a Différend (Peter Lang, 2010).
aaoudjit@nvcc.edu

Steven Halady earned his Ph.D. in philosophy at the University of Buffalo, State University of New York, and is currently visiting assistant professor of philosophy at Canisius College in Buffalo, New York. His current research focuses on metaphysical problems in the philosophy of race and their implications for the promotion of racial justice.
steven.halady@gmail.com

David Lewkowich is a doctoral candidate in McGill University's Faculty of Education. His research interests include young adult literature, reading practices, psychoanalytic theories of learning, and representations of teaching in literature and popular culture. He has previously published articles in JCACS, JCT, Reconstruction, Language and Literacy, Island Studies Journal, and LEARNing Landscapes.
dlewkowich@yahoo.ca

Erin Mikulec, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of secondary education in the Department of Curriculum & Instruction at Illinois State University. Her research interests include teacher education, critical studies, comparative miscue analysis, and second language acquisition.
emikule@ilstu.edu

Paul Chamness Miller, Ph.D., is an associate professor and coordinator of secondary education in the Education Department of Purdue University North Central. His research focuses on social justice issues in education, especially as they pertain to LGBT youth and English language learners, as well as instructed second language acquisition.
pcmill@purdue.edu

Jake Stone is a Ph.D. candidate in educational psychology studying under the guidance of Professor Jeff Sugarman at Simon Fraser University. His research interests combine developmental theory and historical ontology.
jake@jakestone.net