

Contributing Authors

Jennifer M. Bondy is a doctoral student at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. Her many interests include questions of diversity, gender, education, and ethnography.

Rodney A. Clifton is a professor at the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. His research interests include educational policies, minority groups, sociology of education, and higher education.

David Cross is a professor of psychology and associate director of the Institute of Child Development at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Texas. His interests include cybernetics, dynamic systems, Eastern philosophy, and healing hurt children.

Nowell Donovan is provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs of Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Texas. He has authored over 100 scholarly presentations. Among his many awards and honors are Pan Hellenic Council's "Most Outstanding Professor at TCU" in 1996 and 1997 and House of Representative's "TCU Outstanding Professor of the Year" in 2000.

Michelle Forrest is an associate professor and coordinator in educational foundations at Mount Saint Vincent University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada. Her research interests involve re-envisioning communicative competence through a post structural perspective.

Mary Jane Harkins is an assistant professor and coordinator in educational foundations at Mount Saint Vincent University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada. Her scholarship centers on working towards equitable approaches to assessment and instruction for all students.

Wesley Long is an assistant professor of human relations at the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Oklahoma. His research interests include qualitative forms of research.

Robert F. Lusch is professor of marketing in the Eller College of Management at the University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona. He is the author of 125 scholarly articles and 19 books, and has served as chairperson of the American Marketing Association and editor of the Journal of Marketing. His expertise is in the field of marketing strategy and the service-dominant logic of marketing.

Sherrie Reynolds is a professor in the College of Education at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Texas. She is the author of two books and multiple scholarly articles and presentations. Her expertise is in learning and curriculum as viewed through the metaphors of the sciences of complex systems.

Riyad Ahmed Shahjahan is an anti-colonial researcher and pedagogue with interests in spirituality in education and social healing. Currently he is a visiting assistant professor in the Department of Educational Leadership at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

Sonya Singer is a coordinator at the Chignecto—Central Regional School Board near Mount Saint Vincent University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Paul Theobald holds the Woods Beals Chair in Urban and Rural Education at Buffalo State College, Buffalo, New York. He is the author of Teaching the Commons: Place, Pride and the Renewal of Community and Education Now: How Re-thinking America's Past Can Change Its Future.

Courtney Vaughn is a presidential professor in the Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies at the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Oklahoma. She has produced four books and over 60 articles and book chapters in numerous education, sociology, and history journals and publications.

Danny Wade is an assistant professor of English education in the Department of Education at Washburn University, Topeka, Kansas. He was previously a public school language arts coordinator and a University of Oklahoma doctoral student.

Anne Wagner pursues a variety of research interests, including schools, the sacred in higher education, and decolonizing pedagogy. She is an assistant professor in the Department of Sociology and Child and Family Studies at Nipissing University, North Bay, Ontario, Canada.

Njoki Nathani Wane is an associate professor in the Department of Sociology and Equity Studies in Education at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, University of Toronto, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

Kathy L. Wood is an associate professor in the Department of Elementary Education and Reading and the director of the Center for Excellence in Urban and Rural Education at Buffalo State College, Buffalo, New York. Her research interests include urban education and preservice teacher dispositions related to diversity.