

Contributing Authors

Alicia C. Collins is a Coordinator of Transfer Student Activities and an Assistant Professor of Student Affairs at Medgar Evers College of the City University of New York, Brooklyn, New York. She is also the Director of College Now and Collaborative Programs.

Dannielle Joy Davis, Assistant Professor of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies at the University of Texas-Arlington, earned her Ph.D. in Educational Policy at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. She is a recipient of numerous awards, including the American College Personnel Association's Roberta Christie Award for exceptional scholarship on diversity.

Necoal Holiday Driver completed her Ph.D. in Counselor Education and Supervision from Auburn University in May, 2004. Currently she is an Assistant Professor in the Counselor Education Program at Alabama State University, Montgomery, Alabama. Her areas of research are HIV/AIDS and African American Women.

Lamont A. Flowers is the Distinguished Professor of Educational Leadership and the Director of the Charles H. Houston Center for the Study of the Black Experience in Education in the Eugene T. Moore School of Education at Clemson University, Clemson, South Carolina.

Anna L. Green is Director of the Engineering Early College at Atlanta Metropolitan College. She earned a doctorate degree in Educational Psychology from Florida State University, a master's degree in Educational Psychology from Clark Atlanta University, and a bachelor's degree in Psychology from Xavier University of Louisiana. Anna's research interests are in the areas of college students' learning and motivation, mentoring minority women scholars in higher education, and professional development through organizational and leadership skills.

Nicole R. Hill is an Associate Professor in the Department of Counseling at Idaho State University, Pocatello, Idaho. Dr. Hill's scholarly and research interests include play therapy, mental health counseling, working with children and adolescents, multicultural counseling competencies, professional development of faculty and graduate students, and outcome research.

Sharon L. Holmes is an Associate Professor and Director of the MSA Program in the College of Community and Public Affairs at Binghamton University of the State University of New York, Binghamton, New York. Her interests include the intersections of race, class, and gender in the lives of women of color, faculty and administrators, and student development in higher education.

Monica Hunter is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Professional Studies in the College of Education at the University of South Alabama, Mobile, Alabama. Her previous professional experience includes working as a public school elementary teacher, an elementary school counselor and a secondary school counselor.

Kimberly L. King-Jupiter is Associate Dean and an Associate Professor in Educational Leadership in the College of Education at Lewis University, Romeoville, Illinois. Her research interests include examinations of the relationship between educational equity and race and class and gender in K-12 and higher education settings.

Bradford F. Lewis is in the Department of Advanced Leadership and Policy Management at Morgan State University, Baltimore, Maryland. He is also a member of the University Council.

James L. Moore III is an Associate Professor in Counselor Education in the College of Education and Human Ecology at The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio. Professor Moore has over 60 publications, and his research focuses on school counseling, urban education, multicultural education, and gifted education.

Paul E. Pitre is a Professor of Educational Leadership and Counseling Psychology at Washington State University, Pullman, Washington. His research focuses on racial/ethnic minority and low socioeconomic status students' experiences in the college choice process, factors that enhance student aspirations, and college preparation. Pitre's academic interests include P-16 education policy, governance, and politics of education. He is also interested in the role of policy on educational equity and diversity.

Chippewa M. Thomas is an Assistant Professor and Counseling/Community Agency Program Coordinator in the Department of Counselor Education, Counseling Psychology, and School Psychology at Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama. Dr. Thomas' research interests include programming and training issues, professional gate keeping functions, technology, and ethics in counselor education.

L. Octavia Tripp is an Assistant Professor in the College of Education, Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama. She is responsible for teaching science methods to elementary undergraduate pre-service teachers and graduate elementary students. Her research focus is in the area of teacher development with a teaching focus on developing scientifically literate citizens.

Linwood G. Vereen is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Counseling at Idaho State University, Pocatello, Idaho. Dr. Vereen has research interests in cultural foundations, cultural competency, supervision, and group work.